ANOTHER OBJECT LESSON. The colored people should have learned by this time that they gain nothing by insolence to white people and by crime. The Augusta tragedy of Sunday, May 18th, is a case in point, and the colored people have had a long list of object lessons to the same effect. A prominent young gentleman, Mr. Aleck Whitney, and a friend boarded a crowded street car. They precared seats. Presently two negroes came on the cir. Ose of them insisted on taking the seat occupied by Mr. Whitney, who told the negro that there was no room in the seat. The segro's companion, who had gone in a seat just in front of Mr. Whitney, told his comrade to sit there anyhow. The impudent negro thereupon sat in Mr. Whitney's lap. This Mr. Whitney as a matter of course tried to resist, and he struck the negro with the back of his hand. The negro in the front seat, William B. Wilson, immediately turned and deliberately fired a pistol in Mr. Whitney's face. Mr. Whitney died a few minutes afterwards while being carried to the lospital. Not satisfied with having mortally wounding Whitney, the beast Wilson tried to kill Whitney's friend when the latter caught hold of him, but fortunately another murder was prevented by the hammer of the pistol catching the friend's hand. Augusta was naturally set will with excitement. Wilson was arrested on the spot with the pistol in his hand, and hurried to the jul. Angry crowds collected on the streets, and the negre was spirited away. Prominent citizens, among them Dr. Plunkett, the Presbyterian minister, the deceased pastor and friend, counseled law and order, and twice quieted the crowd and recured a promise that there sary to go over the whole story. The negro wrs taken from a deputy from

by 144 buliets. The result is that Augusta will now wage war against the pocket gun and insist on the enforcement of the law there which requires that the whites and blacks shill be separated. This occurrence emphasizes the importance of legislation separating the two races as much as possible. The Georgia law should be followed elsewhere and rigidly enforced.

the train, hanged and his body riddled

The point that we started out to make, however, is that the colored people should learn that they must abandon insolence and impudence. We venture to say that no colored, man has ever been grossly insulted by a real white gentleman without the negro provoking the insult. The colored man will gain the respect and the help of the white man when he behaves himself in a way to deserve it. They should follow the advice of such men as Bookter T. Washington and him. Rev. Carroll, of their own race. These colored men are respected by the white people, and they only have to ask to receive help from the whites. In this connection we refer to the out West, a colored missionary to Africa addressed a large audience, and among other things said that the pioneer missionaries to Africa were the godly women of Old Virginia who clothed and gave the gospel to their slaves, which is really the truth. Thousands of such missionaries can rick, last week. be found in this State. The speaker counseled his race to learn useful trades and practice industry.
